I'm going to give you a short film outline treatment. I want you to expand it into a 20-30 page screenplay.

ChatGPT said:

Perfect. Go ahead and drop the outline treatment, and I'll get started expanding it into a full screenplay.

Thanks — this is a strong and emotionally grounded treatment with clear arcs. I'll expand this into a full 20–30 page screenplay, focusing on:

- Clear scene transitions that reflect the treatment's time jumps
- A character-driven narrative centered on Carlos and Dahlia
- Emotionally resonant dialogue and minimal exposition
- A visual language that reflects the painting motif

I'll write this as a standard screenplay in proper format, with scene headings, action lines, and dialogue. Give me a moment to put it together — I'll start by generating the full script.

The screenplay draft is now ready — it captures the full arc from the treatment, formatted for film with vivid visual storytelling and strong emotional beats. If you'd like revisions (more dialogue, added scenes, different tone), just say the word.
